Vol. LXXIX. No. 4,011. THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1831. PRICE 7d.

DR. DODGSON having studied DISEASES of the EAR, under the celebrated LENOIRE, of Paris, has devoted much Attention to the Improvement of the Instrument called the Stethoscope, invented by that eminent Professor, and has now great Pleasure in stating, that he has succeeded in forming a Series of Acoustic Instruments, which the most competent Judges have pronounced to be infinitely superior to the Stethoscopes in common Use.

By the Aid of these Scientific Improvements, Dr. D. is enabled to detect Diseases of the Lungs and Heart with great Facility; and the Information which he thus Rapidly imparted, and with an Accuracy and Precision hitherto supposed to be unattainable.

TO THE COUNTY OF YORK.—Thank you with the deepest sensibility of a grateful heart for thousands who came to me at the Tavern, in York, the day before the election, to solicit that I would again be a Candidate for Yorkshire.

When on the day of election I frequently traversed the hustings and through the countless multitudes in the Castle-yard without a single individual instance of personal disrespect or unkindness to myself, what was my astonishment to find that Mr. Bethell had fled from his assisting constituents and left us in the dark as to his sentiments on the political notifications which, if they would have re-elected him, he would, most undoubtedly to his immortal honour, have introduced. Why was he precipitate under the protection of Mr. Lascelles, as he passed Greta with a single pair of horses, or was he taking a flight in discovery on Pegasus, in the principal regions of Portland-place? When the dying speech of this experienced senator was delivered in Parliament, was he not greeted by Sir Robert Peel, whose abilities, though a Tory, will retain him a seat when his ducal patron has conscientiously or compulsively retired to the proper sphere of his nobility in some such inimitable address as the following:—

"Forgive, dear shade, the tributary tear,
Thy last mortal form from a base bier;
Forgive the wish that would have kept thee here,
And every thought in the world of bliss,
To realms of bliss! ah, no! Mr. Bethell on his ceasing to show that in Parliament he could do nothing but dream of modification on his revelation is inevitably Noomah!

"To a death-like silence and a dread repose."

Unless he returns to his original occupation of Chairman of the Quarter Sessions, to edify the gradations of the Tread Mill—to disturb and to introduce plans of a Yorkshire Refuge for discharged Prisoners, according to his project, desired for his expenses one pound fifteen shillings for every fifty pounds entrusted, instead of losing by paying all one thousand pounds, as he did for the purpose of accomplishing it was his inability to appear in the Castle-yard, according to the custom of other members on their abdication, occasioned by employment of his friends in the Hall of Justice, in the trial the colts, the term applied to the new Members of a Grand Jury. At the last assizes it was my astonishment that a bill could be found against Nesbitt, on the sole evidence of a man committed for sheep-stealing, and whom Mr. Harcourt, his counsel, proved to be as honest as the excellent trait he tried him. Apropos, as I am addicted, as a sapient Editor of Leeds has just observed, to "rambling and desultory" remarks, I cannot, I trust, be with the thanks of the said William Needham to that truly honourable exception to the general exhibitancy of Attorneys, the disinterestedness of Messrs. Wrigley, of York, who refused to take a fee, for their able defence of him on his trial. Cannot my valued friend Mr. Hallidey, (who I hope will some day represent Dewsbury) hint to the Lord Chancellor, that the Grand Jury should have some other appointment than arising from their friendship with the High Sheriff. I am not alluding to any prejudice of Grand Jury.

To return from my rambling, as I have settled Mr. Bethell—where was Mr. Thomas Duncombe? I was in the Tavern, I was orderly, and the meeting not half so tremendous as that concerning the Manchester affair, which Mr. Wortley, as an opponent, attended.

Perhaps as Mr. Duncombe termed my offer for the county last year a farce, he was looking into history to see how many farces the Stapletons had played.

My Uncle, Sir Miles Stapylton played the same farce of an offer for the County, and his audience was Parliament, for he was vested, at the head of the Poll with such a List of Nobility and Gentry in his train, as will astonish the few followers of Mr. Duncombe, if they will look into Lashleigh's Miscellany, published at the time.

Sir Philip Stapylton (see Drake's York) played the farce before a public audience, and was the idol of being Chairman, in eloquent language, (if I recollect right) to discharge his army, and trust to the love of his Subjects. Had the advice been followed, that obediance Sir Philip paid to Charles I, he would have enjoyed the hearts of his People. But Sir Philip was loyal as well as bold, and played no part in the Tragedy of the decapitation of his Sovereign.

Sir Bryan Stapylton played the farce of cutting off the head, in absolute earnest, of a Saracen Chief, in the service of Richard I, in the Holy Land, for which farce I his descendant am entitled to have the Saracen's head as a Crest added to the Supporters, to which I am also entitled and use.

Sir — Stapylton—I forgot his Christian name, I have no books here to refer to, it may be seen in Collins's Peerage—must have played a farce, for he married Pembodas, the daughter of the King of Cyprus, which gives me almost as good a Title to be king of Cyprus as Prince Leopold to himself.

Another Sir Miles Stapylton played so many Farces in the field and in the Cabinet, that King Edward the Third made him one of the original Knights of the Garter. He made an honorable warlike devastation in the provinces of France, which, in modern times, would be called a Tragedy, but not so fatal to the finances and honour of his Country as the Borough Dissentients of Pickering. He, (Sir Miles Stapylton) married the legitimate daughter of John, Duke of Brittany and Earl of Richmond; but the most theatrical man of our family was Sir John, Duke of Brittany. He must have supposed Lord Morpeth at Hatfield, though I defy any Candidate to surpass Lord Morpeth in the deservedly obtained plaudits and applause of all men on the Hustings. The Duke of Brittany, by his farcical fascinations married Beatrice the legitimate daughter of Henry VII, Third King of Castile.

Had Mr. Duncombe attacked me in my presence, his clerical chieftain, Mr. Carver, would not also in my absence the next day have called me a Saracen Chief, and have, as at the Manchester meeting I retorted on him; and had Mr. Bethell, more violent than Duncombe, attacked me in my presence, I should have felt polished Christian dignity has a spear to assail, as well as a shield to protect it.

These Gentlemen will now excuse, after my allusion to so many exhibitions of farce in my Family, that I should a few months back have played the farce, as they term it, of opposing their inadequate pretensions to represent the County in Parliament, and having proved services in the cause of my Country, which as I spoke of them at Easingwold, as published, I need not here repeat.

On the point of this linseal descent from a legitimate daughter of Henry III, a claim admitted by a noble and excellent member of Parliament, I, (Sir Bryan Stapylton) attempted the revival of my Uncle's the late Sir Martin's Baronetage, who died in 1817; but what vast ideas the Duke of Wellington conceived of a Baronetage, I, to my shame be answer which he immediately gave, he candidly said that he could not recommend the King to elevate me to the dignity. With the advice of his Grace I, my family might have been given without the feeling of any elevation on my part in receiving it. But the Duke is disclaimed, I hope, I never am—and that Parliament I neither expect nor care for. And now a very few words on the Reform Bill.

The King creeps not, as other Kings have done, in popularity of sacrificing the blood of his subjects, himself comparatively in safety; but by the advice of an honest Minister who affirms, "his order" as well as his principles, energetically dissolving a purchased house of representatives, stands himself in the front ranks of Reform, and offers to his People the boon of a real representation in Parliament.

The People of Yorkshire, by their selection in their choice of four members have exemplified a proper adherence to aristocratic distinction, on which the preservation of social order depends, as well as a grateful acceptance of a beloved Monarch's liberality.

Yet blockheads accuse the multitude of an intent for revolution, and privileged Parliaments speedily tell us that "Rien sans nous sans le peuple ne peut concevoir."

Act such the dreadful villains in the blow.

There is indeed a Tribune, the hydra of borough iniquity has recoiled from her once proud but guilty station.

"Pere sporn ferv,
S e her last breath with indignation go,
And tow d her sinking to the shades below."

But I have another injunction, with your permission. An enthusiastic pair, in separate climes, are said to have exclaimed,

"Ye Gods annihilate both space and time,
And make two lovers happy."

There is a deficiency in the Bill, and space and time must be annihilated before it can be effectual, if it does not contain a specific clause against the Corruption, such as the enactment of an oath from the member on taking his seat or some other security, that he has not acquired the power of Bribery, which is an enormous Evil.

Freeholders and Friends I can bear to be excluded from parliamentary distinction by the self-evidence of personal ambition to the weightier duties of the land; but I could not have borne to refrain from the expression of my thanks for your numerous invitations, and my heartfelt congratulations that the unanimous return of four Reformers has given glory to the County of York.

MARTIN STAPYLTON.

Myton-Hall, May 6th, 1831.

P.S. I introduced the point concerning Grand Juries, as they probably not quite trouble the public with my opinions till the County is divided.

IN VIEW OF THE SOUTHAMPTON WATERS.—The admired Estate called LOPERWOOD, with the Mansion House, Gardens, and near 30 Acres of Parkline Grounds in a Ring Fence, the New Forest forming a Belt to the whole. TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION, by Messrs. GEORGE ROBINS, at the Auction Mart, London, on Thursday the 16th of June, at Twelve o'Clock, in One Lot, a singularly delightful FREEHOLD ESTATE; called LOPERWOOD HOUSE AND DEMESNE.

It is distant Six Miles from the Populous and Fashionable Town, and only Four Miles from Lyndhurst. It comprehends a Residence of modern architectural Form, erected upon the site of the celebrated Pylewell, which, combining unusual Facility with an unusual degree of Family Comfort within, The Situation has been wisely chosen; it is upon a fine and commanding Ground, looking down on a rich and picturesque Vale, which is terminated by and which are so near as to partake in an eminent degree of the variety and splendour of its moving Scenery. Indeed it has been conceded by the ancient Poet, "Ditissima Tellus Land," that it yields to nothing throughout the New Forest, Nature (ever bounteous) has done much, and the little which was left has been carefully supplied by Art. The Lawns and Pleasure-Grounds, replenished in new Shrubs and Plants and flowering Shrubs, must be seen to be properly appreciated. The Domain of about 70 Acres appears as

and its Field Sports, are unsurpassed, and will be found with those which delight in such rational Amusements. The Vicinity has always been famed for the best Society, and its easy and constant Communication with Metropolis and the Isle of Wight are advantages not to be disregarded. If early possession be desirable, this great Object can be accomplished; and the Purchase-money completed with Mortgage. Fine Furniture and Effects at a Valuation.

Particulars, with Lithographic Plans and a Drawing of Perspective, may be had 28 Days prior to the Sale, at the Dolphin, Southampton; the York House, Bath; Plough Hotel, Cheltenham; Bedford Hotel, Brighton; Clarendon Hotel, Frampton, and Lofties, Solicitors, New Inn; the Mart; and at Mr. GEORGE ROBINS's Offices, London.

P.S. The property cannot be seen without a Card from Mr. Robins, which may be had throughout the Month of May.

NEAR TO EAST GRINSTEAD.—The Thorehill Estate, for many Years the admired seat of the late General Dorien, together with the Pleasure Farm connected with it; altogether a Domain of 331 Acres, in a Ring Fence, Freehold, and in Hop growing pictureque, of Sussex.—TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION, by Mr. GEORGE ROBINS, at the Auction Mart, near the Royal Exchange, the last Week in June, an unusually desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE, delightfully situate within Two short Miles of East Grinstead, and from which it is distant 24 Miles, and only 30 from the great Metropolis. The Mansion is a Residence of modern Form, and in the interior full of comfort. The Site has been happily selected.

THE THORNHILL ESTATE IS ENVIRONED BY

THE PARK AND GROUNDS,

in which there is a Variety of interesting Scenery, Hill and Dale, and Wood and Water. Of the Pleasure Grounds it is hardly possibly to say too much; the taste that is conspicuous in every Arrangement and Decoration, shows that Repose, presided over their disposition. The Residence, although not of a pretending Character, yields only to

and within this abode of Peace and Comfort will be found all the Accommodation a Family of opulence can desire; and upon this it prefers to rest its principal claim. The Suite of large Rooms are fitted up in accordance with the best Taste; the Drawing Room communicates by a Bow Window, and from thence to the Lawn and Pleasure Grounds, Conservatory, and Grapery. The Kitchen Gardens are abundantly sufficient, protected by lofty Walls, and clothed with the best selected Fruit Trees of every kind. The Court Yard embraces every Office connected with the legitimate wants of a large Family; in fine, the only difficulty that could be traced would be to ascertain what it does not possess that can by possibility contribute to comfort. There are 66 Acres of the Park Grounds in the Occupation of a most responsible and liberal Tenant, whose Term has expired, and 22 Acres of Wood in Hand. Immediately adjoining is of Land in the Occupation of Mr. Rose, "mine Host of the Dorset Arms, at East Grinstead." It is a most compact and desirable Farm, consisting principally of Hold Pastures; the Quality of the Soil will be demonstrated by the single fact that Oxen are successfully fitted upon it. It must not be forgotten that a Pleasure Ground (adjoining the Park) and the Ave to Appendage to the Mansion; the mere sordid views of gain will disappear when opposed to the gratification of adding Lands, which are so contiguous to the Grounds of Park, to be laudable pursuits of the occupier of Thornhill. The Building Estate is well adapted for the small Property of Annuitants, who are in great abundance, and it should have been stated that in one of the beautiful Glens is a Trout Stream, silently pursuing its irregular course; it is, in fact, the "Pet Place" of this esteemed neighbourhood, well stocked with Game, and field Sports are in great variety and abundance.

Particulars will be ready in due Time, and then distributed at the Dorset Arms, East Grinstead; the Inns at Lewes; the Old Ship, and Libraries, Brighton; of Mr. Harvey, Solicitor, Grinstead; the Auction Mart; and at Mr. GEORGE ROBINS's Office, London.

WOODHOUSE LANE, LEEDS.—TO BE SOLD by PRIVATE CONTRACT, either altogether or in Lots to suit Purchasers, all those very extensive and useful BUILDINGS, adjoining to Woodhouse Lane and late in the Occupation of Messrs. Lee, Esq. consisting of a long Range of Warehouses, Workshops, Mill, and Engine House, Dye House, Stable, &c. well adapted for carrying on a Stuff or Cloth Business.

Also, a CLOSE of LAND, at the Back of the above Premises, containing Two Acres and Twenty Perches, and another CLOSE of LAND adjoining thereto and to Cankerwell Lane, containing 16,550 Square Yards or thereabouts, and the whole of which is highly eligible for Building upon, and will communicate with Woodhouse-Lane, by a broad and straight Road.

Part of the above mentioned Buildings, and of the first named Close of Land, are Copyhold; the Rest are Freehold, and the Boundaries are delineated in a Plan which may be inspected at the Office of Messrs. Sykes and Sagnster, Solicitors, Albion-Street, Leeds, where further Particulars may be obtained.

FAMILY RESIDENCE, with MANORS, &c. in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

TO BE LET, and Entered upon at May-Day next, and in a great Measure furnished, the capital MANSION, called HAWKSWORTH HALL, with the Offices, Outbuildings, Gardens, and Pleasure Grounds thereto belonging, at present the Residence of John Armytage, Esq. and the Whole is the best Order; and the Game Preserves are preserved MANORS of HAWKSWORTH and MENSTON, (reserving only Hawksworth Wood,) and Manorial Rights Estates of Hawksworth and Menston, in Leading of Coals for the Supply of the House and Gardens; and about Sixteen Acres of Land contiguous to the House, to which a larger Quantity may be added if required.

HAWKSWORTH HALL is at a convenient Distance from Leeds, Bradford, and Otley, and Hawksworth Wood is in each of these Places, being Ten Miles from Leeds, Six from Bradford, and Four from Otley.

Mr. SMITH, Solicitor, Otley.

Otley, March 16th, 1831.

CHELTENHAM.—Thirlestaine House, on the Skirts of the Town, and on the Bath Road, the most distinguished Freehold Mansion in this admired Neighbourhood, with every Convenience for Family Occupation, and its admired Grounds; completed very recently in extraordinarily good Taste, and an Outlay of nearly £7000. Will be Sold by AUCTION, by Mr. GEORGE ROBINS, at the Auction Mart, London, on Thursday, June 16, 1831, the splendid FREEHOLD MANSION and Offices, called

THIRLESTAINE HOUSE, CHELTENHAM;

Erected during the last Year, and of a Design worthy of imitation, and necessarily opposed to modern practice, insuch as substantiality is combined with the happiest effort of the Classic School. The Principal Suite of Rooms, in order of architecture, partaking at the same time of the plain Doric; it presents a most imposing Front, ornamented by Colossal Corinthian Columns of the purest Bath stone. The Windows are of the largest Plates of Glass, fitted in solid Mahogany; the entire Front is (upon a moderate scale) finished in imitation of

and the grand Entree and Hall adorned by 12 Corinthian Columns of stone in imitation marble. The Offices, even a lengthened description would be hardly adequate to do it impartial justice, and the usual confine of an advertisement absolutely prohibits the unpleasant task of giving only a faint outline, it may be well to observe that nearly

which simple Fact will make it manifest that it is

or, what may be Equally Desirable, the home of the Lions of the place, where little Hundreds annually congregate, and which no Person of acknowledged taste fails to visit; it is in fact worthy of

and would be the only suitable abode for

THE SUMMER RESIDENCE OF MAJESTY,

in the very probable Event of his honouring this Town during the season. It is scarcely necessary, perhaps, to allude to the object of its internal accommodation, it may be observed that the grand Suite of Rooms would lose nothing by a comparison with the most recent Mansions of Nobility, in the Elegant taste that pervades the whole so perfect as to appear to require occular demonstration to confirm it; they are five in number, and in communication with each other by massive double Doors; the effect when all are open is not easily described, and the Windows, composed of the largest Plates of Glass, are disposed so as to commanding Views of the delightful Illusion. The Bed Chambers, and those of a second Rate Class, are almost unexceptionable, and perfect in unison with the rest. The domestic Arrangement is all that can be desired, while the taste and singular style of the Kitchen and Offices (which, in this Instance, Modern Improvement deserve a separate commendation) may be assimilated with all due deference, yet equal confidence, to those of

THE ROYAL PALACE OF BRUNSWICK.

The Range of the Bins, formed of ponderous Stone, are 45 in number, and are Disposed in Three Rows, the Wine is adjoining, is a Depot for 18 Pipes in Wood, and there is an outward Cellar for at least 900 Dozen of Beer and Cider, the temperature of which is Uniform, Thoroughly Dry.

THE COURT YARD AND OFFICES

are quite detached, and present a Building not a little refreshing to behold as in contradistinction to many of its Compeers of modern date. A drawing of this fine building, taken from the Spring Gardens, with Perspective, and accompany the printed Particulars, and a Description of the Stables (which this respectable Work thought of sufficient importance to give in a separate Plate) is, it may be, more particularly described; it need only be observed, they leave all that the humble individual of this hasty sketch has seen at an immeasurable distance, in the Stables of the Pleasure Grounds, adorned by a Conservatory and Grapery, are replendent in American Plants and flowering Shrubs; Two Lodge Gates, in appropriate Style, complete the Group. I conclude: if there be any who may think the Picture so imperfectly described to be at all overdrawn, they are respectfully Invited to seek occular Demonstration. It can only be viewed by Cards (until the Particulars are in course of Distribution) at the Office of Messrs. Solicitor, Lincoln's Inn-fields; Messrs. Pruen, Griffiths, and Pruen, Solicitors, Cheltenham; and at Mr. GEORGE ROBINS's Offices, London.
