Letter from the Vicarage

If you could have a month named after you which one would it be? Which month would most reflect who you think you are? I think for me the month of David would have to be what we now call April. I see myself as essentially optimistic and a glass half full kind of person and someone who loves the new and revels in change and adventure. So to my mind April is the month that reflects that – nature's optimistic month that brings in the new year of growth and renewal. So I fully expect that next year we will go March, David, May. How about you, what month are you going to claim?

The reason I mention this as we start August is that August is one of only two months that is actually named after someone – in this case the Emperor Augustus. As I mentioned last year in this newsletter he chose this month because it was the month in which he celebrated his most famous military victories and the Roman Senate were happy to bow to his vanity. If Trump carries on as he is no doubt the US Senate will vote to change the name of November to Trump or Trumpember or Trumply to celebrate his election triumph before too long.

There can be few greater demonstrations of power than the power to change the calendar. Augustus's immediate predecessor Julius Caesar reorganised the whole year and gave his name to the subsequent 'Julian' calendar (and the month of July) that then defined 'time' for much of the world for over 1600 years. It was the church, Pope Gregory XIII in fact, that adjusted it in 1582 to account for the fact that the Julian calendar had the year length very slightly out so there had been 'drift' in the seasons such as Easter and the equinoxes were clearly out of whack. While this 'new' Gregorian calendar has been adopted globally in civil society there are still parts of the Orthodox Church that use the Julian calendar for religious purposes.

So both Julius and Augustus held power over the way we name and count time. Four years after Augustus renamed his month a baby was born in Bethlehem that held the ultimate power over time because he was the creator of it in the first place. Jesus didn't change months or calendars but he changed humanity's relationship with God and so with time itself. The power that Jesus displayed broke down the gap between the temporal and the eternal – between the mortal and immortal. In his death and resurrection Jesus offered us the gift of stepping outside time and activating an eternal relationship with God. That's power that Julius and Augustus could not even have dreamed of having.

And it's a power that is offered to each and every one of us. Having months named after us is a mere bagatelle compared with having God name you as one of his own and give you the power of not being bound by time, that is to become a timeless creature.

Stay blessed,

David

Holton & Waterperry W.I.

After two wet garden meetings, we were blessed, at last, with a summer (even hot) evening in the Holton orchard on July 1st. We started with our bring and share supper, all magnificently produced and followed up with Pimms and fruit skewers. Homespun entertainment was the theme of the evening and much enjoyed for all that. An entertaining quiz based on WI archives, an amusing follow up recitation, news and great camaraderie. It was so pleasant to sit out in the orchard on a warm summer's evening.

We have been busy too and new events are planned. We helped serve teas at the recent craft fair and will provide desserts again at the Holton BBQ on 1st August. We have had another walk and a new one planned for 30th July. We are off to the Playhouse to see 'Jesus Christ Superstar' and have our outing to Rycote house, park and chapel, specially opened for us, on 18th August, plus lunches at the Lambert Arms. We have visited other WI's and have a Warwickshire WI coming to visit us. Also enjoyed a morning at a fused glass craft course.

Our own craft course, making fabric and beaded cards proved popular in the village hall, plus splendid tea and cake of course. Another craft afternoon is planned for the 29th July. So we are participating in other activities as well as our meetings.

Our September 2nd talk is called 'Can Onions Cure Earache?' - medical advice from the 1700's. More details later. Visitors and potential new members welcome.

Barbara Martin

And here is the WI Report from July, which the editor apologises for missing out in the last edition!

The title 'Witches, Scolds and Mouldy Jades' belied a fascinating and well-researched talk from Amy Moore who packed in so much information in for us to digest. The talk was based on her PhD thesis studied over four years as a mature student. Such thorough research was undertaken at the Centre for Oxfordshire Studies in Cowley (always worth a visit) and in the Bodleian library. Amy delved into the lives of women between 1575 and 1640. Oxford's population of 5,000 in 1575 rose to 10,000 by 1640 when freemen, churchwardens and the judiciary presided over local business. Whilst as children we all read in history books about the scold's bridle and the ducking stool (which often rotted) it seems there was only one instance of this taking place in Oxford in this timeframe 'Mouldy Jades' refers to old horses or nags - gossiping women! Such thorough research was much-appreciated.

We also had a flourishing produce table and a flower raffle.

Not only do we have interesting talks but we have had two delightful walks - Tiddington to Waterperry with tea and Great Milton and Great Haseley with lunch. Another walk is proposed for the 23rd June. Our outing is planned for 18th August and names were taken. Our new venture, craft afternoons, was well supported on the 10th June. A theatre visit is also to look forward to. We will also hold a stall at the village BBQ on 1st August. So, WI is not just about meetings - spin offs are also varied and of interest.

Holton Bus Shelter Bring and Take

I have put on quite a bit of weight these last few months. This has been brought about, in no small part, by having to eat so many of my words. Of course there will never be a bus service in Holton. Keir Starmer can't win the election. Home-working is here for good. Arsenal will win the Premier League... the list is endless!

If you haven't used the new bus service yet, then why not give it a go? I rushed there in its first week, bus-pass in hand. My photo is not very flattering. I look like I have just been arrested after crawling out of a bin following a night out on the town. It is so bad I had decided that I might just pay for my ticket instead. Imagine my delight when I was told the service is free. You should try it.

The summer edition of the Bring and Take took place in baking heat and bright sunshine. It was well attended but there were not quite as many people as usual. I imagine many were sheltering in their living rooms with the curtains drawn or lying on the kitchen floor next to a fridge with an open door. Despite this lots of bringing and a more moderate taking was evident. I am pleased to report that green fingers are in evidence. For instance, two garden kneelers were brought along and disappeared to new homes in seconds.

The collection was for Dementia UK and we raised £135 for this worthy cause. Thanks to you all for your continued generosity.

The next event at the bus shelter, apart from the bus, will be the second installment of Book Week. A selection of fiction books for all ages will be on the shelves from Saturday 16^h August until lunchtime on Sunday 24th August. Please do come along and help yourself to anything that you'd like to read. If you are bringing along books to swap please restrict them to paperback fiction as my back and the car's suspension are struggling with some of the mighty tomes we receive.

The next Bus Shelter Bring and Take will be on Sunday, 28th September. Hope to see you there. I am the one who looks like the kind of person you might meet down a dark alley. And if you don't believe it then just ask to see my bus pass.

Holton News

It seems to have been a busy month in Holton, despite being hunkered down against the high temperatures. The village teas have continued throughout the heatwave and have remained popular events. The stalwarts who keep these events going are just incredible and all deserve medals, long may they continue.

The good weather persisted for the Craft Fair and there were a good number of stalls, ranging from paintings to jewellery via local honey. There were lovely things to see and buy. These days I don't carry much cash but it was all gone very quickly. Others remarked that the wood turning displays were excellent and very useful. I missed the tea and cake but was told they were up to the usual high standard, so well received as it was warm.

An interesting variation to our usual round of events was a visit from Spud Bud. You may have seen his 'emporium' parked outside the Sun Pub in Wheatley. The pub has given up the unequal struggle with a very small kitchen and relies on vendors selling eg pizzas etc to feed the hungry drinkers. The Spud Bud is basically a baked potato van and his wares are tasty and very welcome as they are mostly gluten-free and hot. There were a good number of takers, including those who took their dinners away to eat at home rather than in the orchard or the village hall. We may see him again in the not too distant future.

Don't forget that the Village Barbeque is almost upon us so let's hope the weather stays good for the 1 August. There will be the usual entertainments and entrance is free. See the adverts elsewhere on the telegraph poles and in the Village Mag.

As the price of everything goes up so does the price of water as Thames Water are going bust. Just to rub salt in the wound of massive bonuses paid to managers and significant price rises we are now getting a hosepipe ban. Whose idea was it to privatise the water companies?

Another area that defies gravity is the price of petrol. Asda is now selling petrol at higher prices than Shell who are always on the high side. It's cheaper to slog your way up to Headington or even better to fill up a Tesco in Cowley where you can save 7p per litre and get your shopping at the same time. Every little helps.

Take care

Holton Cock and Bull

A man who was stopped for drink-driving in the German city of Bochum was no doubt inflicted with a touch of guilty conscience when he decided to pose as a friend.

However, he had overlooked one particularly relevant factor. Police records indicated that, while all the details seemed to be correct, the man whose name had been given was registered as having a glass eye. A torch beam shone in the face demonstrated that this driver's eyes were all too real. Police were sceptical of the man's claim that he used to have a glass eye, but did not any more.

No information was available regarding the friend's reaction to the incident, but one might expect that it pushed the bounds of the relationship a little too far.

Waterstock News

Hear ye! Hear ye!

It has been a month of much changing weather, and Waterstock has looked resplendent.

We are still waiting to hear about the development proposal for the golf course, the decision for which has been pushed back into the Autumn.

If you would like to join the Ride and Stride on Saturday September 13th, in support of Oxfordshire Historic Churches Trust, please contact Michael Tyce at Camilla Cottage.

At the moment, Gill reports hedgehogs and kindly requests that you put water out for them in this heat. Michael reports the opposite phenomenon, in an abundance of badgers elsewhere in the village.

Thank you to Sarah for kindly hosting the village at her 4th July gathering this past month. It was great to see so many of you in fine form!

I have moved home for the summer and am learning the drums, so if anyone is interested in a jam/making some music (drum related or otherwise), please contact me on:- cbglmacfarlane@gmail.com.

Additionally I feel there is a wealth of natural music to be sampled and created with around the village, which I would be happy to talk more about with any interested parties. I will leave you with this poem (mainly written by Lewis Carroll), and enjoy your August!

In Waterstock,
Where the slithy toves did gyre and gimble in the ditch,
The moorhen cries reach a fever pitch.

Beware the kingfisher my son!
The wings that flap, the beak that spears,
Beware the yapping daschund (tammy) lest it brings you to tears. (Like this poem.)

The badgers take their vorpal sword,
And do battle with the manxome hedgehog,
And all above the egrets soar, and come to rest upon the summer fog.

Hast thou slain the development?
Come to my arms, my beamish boy!
Oh frabjous day! callooh! Callay!
I chortle in my joy.
