Welcome to Boyton

Boyton lies just above the River Tamar, on the border of Devon and Cornwall. The nearest town is Launceston, five miles to the south. Essentially a farming community, the Parish covers approximately 7 sq. miles and at its highest is about 400 feet above sea level. In 1811 the population of the parish was 402 persons and the number of people on the 2011 census was surprisingly much the same at 425.

Boyton continues to change and develop but it remains a friendly and welcoming community. The Thursday coffee mornings are an opportunity for neighbours to meet and chat. The two churches hold regular services and there is a thriving primary school which welcomes pupils from inside and outside the Parish. Details of all village organisations are listed inside. The Parish Council website has details of the Boyton Monthly Diary.
