[C] Now Mr Wu was a [G7] laundry man in a [C] shop with an [G7] old green [C] door
[G7] He'd iron all day your [C] linen away, He [D7] really makes me [G7] sore
He's [F] lost his heart to a Chinese girl and his [C] laundry's all gone wrong
All [D7] day he'll flirt and scorch your shirt that's why I'm singing this [G7] song
Oh Mr [C] Wu, what shall I [A7] do,
I'm feeling [D7] kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry [C] blues

This [C7] funny [F] feeling, keeps round me [C] stealing
Oh [D7] won't you throw your sweat-heart over [G7] do
My vests so [C] short, that it won't fit [C7] my little brother
And [F] my new Sunday shirt has got a [D7] perforated rudder
Mr Wu [C] what shall I [A7] do,
I'm feeling [D7] kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry [C] blues

[C] Now Mr Wu, he's got a [C7] naughty eye that flickers
You [F] ought to see it wobble when he's [D7] ironing ladies blouses!
Oh Mr Wu [C] what shall I [A7] do,
I'm feeling [D7] kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry [C] blues

[C] Now Mr Wu, he's got a [C7] laundry kind of tricking,
He'll [F] starch my shirt and collars but he'll [D7] never touch my waistcoat!
Oh Mr Wu [C] what shall I [A7] do,
I'm feeling [D7] kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry [C] blues

[C] A boy went there and took some [C7] laundry for his mummie,
[F] Mr Wu burned holes in mummies [D7] nice new Sunday cammies
Oh Mr [C] Wu, what shall I [A7] do,
I'm feeling [D7] kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry [C] blues.

[C] Now Mr Wu, at washing [C7] shirts is very handy, but [F] he'd go broke if all the men wore [D7] shirts like Mr Gandhi
Oh Mr Wu [C] what shall I [A7] do,
I'm feeling [D7] kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry [C] blues

Oh Mr Wu [C] what shall I [A7] do,
I'm feeling [D7] kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry,
[D7]Kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry,
[D7]kind of Limehouse [G7] Chinese laundry [C] bluuuuuuuuuuues [G7↓] [C↓]
