Le Grand Hasard Military Cemetery started in the First World War. There are 300 Commonwealth burials of the First World War in the cemetery.

Two further plots of 138 burials were added to the cemetery during the Second World War. Among these later burials, all dating from May and June 1940, are special memorials to a number of casualties known to be buried within the cemetery whose graves could not be precisely located. 58 of the graves are unidentified.
