Digging in Exton ... Could it be a temple?

Excavations over the last two summers in an Exton field reveal a Roman hexagonal building, which is now thought to be a rare example of a temple, of which there are only four in Britain, rather than a villa and it might have looked like this.

Did you watch Digging for Britain on BBC4, 22 November? If not, you have time on i-player to catch-up. An interesting programme, but for those short on time, fast forward to the last 10 minutes.
