

The red hatched area is keyed as: Sites of Nature Conservation Importance (SNCI). This raises the question when the Cemetery was extended did this designation also extend? I would hope so, having found specimens of a relatively rare herbaceous plant ("Ragged Robin", Silene flos-cuculi - England Red-List: Near Threatened) at the far end of the extension, around the pond, for the last 2 years running, surviving and apparently expanding its range.

Presumably the BTC Environment Committee need to be alerted so that they can pursue with RDC and others widening the Cemetery Designation, to its full extent...?
