A GOOD READ

Miss Benson's Beetle by Rachel Joyce

In 1914 London when Margery was ten years old, she lost her father, four brothers and her home all at the same time. There was nothing for it but to go to live with her extremely religious and pessimistic spinster aunts. Margery's mother and aunts never spoke of what happened in the past, and her mother spent all her time sitting in a chair.

Obsessed with beetles, especially the Golden Flower Beetle, she researches and studies the small creatures until her late twenties when she has another great loss in her life. This starts a twenty year lonely period as a school teacher where she is bullied and made fun of by students and teachers alike, just as she was treated in her younger days.

Finally, after more abuse by her students, Margery marches out of the school where she taught, a pair of purloined boots under her arm, and realises she is now free to travel to New Caledonia to search for the Golden Beetle, the obsession of her younger days.

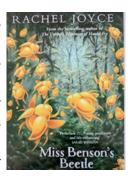

She can't do it alone and so enlists the help of a French speaking companion, Enid Pretty, who is the exact opposite of Margery.

The bottle blonde Enid with her sherbet yellow hair, her numerous pots, creams and potions, was not the first choice. In fact she was rejected at the first meeting but when the chosen candidate backed out it was either Enid or to go alone.

Both women had their own reasons for leaving the country and amidst adversity and joy, an unlikely friendship began to blossom. Together they found themselves drawn into an adventure that exceeded all Margery's expectations, eventually finding new life at the top of a red mountain.

There are some glorious descriptions of the journey especially in New Caledonia and you feel you are hacking through the undergrowth with the women as they blaze a trail in search of the elusive Beetle. This is a novel well worth reading with all the ingredients and more for a good read.

THROUGH THE GARDEN GATE

I have to start with a correction to the last issue. I suggested using willow and dogwood pruning's as stakes, pushing them into the ground upside down. Believe me, that doesn't work they still grow, as I've found out! I've heard that if you plunge them into boiling water that may stop them from rooting but don't hold me to it. I've also found out that if you leave both willow and dogwood cuttings lying on the ground, they will also root even when not pushed into the soil. Determined little devils but so very good for winter colour – I wouldn't be without them.

All of the shrubs and trees appeared to grow a lot more than normal last year, probably as a result of global warming. My monkey puzzle tree, planted in April 2019 and measuring just 45 inches, has put on tremendous growth and is now an impressive 89 inches tall, having grown 24 inches last year and doubling its' size in just 3 years. It still shelters ladybirds during the winter but even the resourceful squirrels haven't managed to climb it - and still no monkeys!!!

At the end of the monkey puzzle area is a chestnut post and rail fence at each end of which I've planted clematis so that they can scramble up and around it. In the middle of the fence there is a wisteria which I am trying to train into a standard like the ones I saw when visiting Burrow Farm Gardens near Axminster. I noticed that, even though it was only planted 3 years ago, it was covered in flower buds this year, until the late frost in April when all of the buds shrivelled up. But, all is not lost as there are new flower buds forming! I guess I must expect that as it does not benefit from the shelter of a wall.

My pheasant population has been expanding as there are now 2 hens and 2 cocks. The cocks don't seem to do any damage in the garden but the same cannot be said for the hens that systematically ate all of the crocuses. I just hope they decide to move on to pastures new before eating anything else!!

Some of the things they haven't tried to eat yet are the Erysimum Bowles Mauve, a perennial wallflower which hasn't stopped flowering since planted last spring. Also, off their diet, are the Primula Showstoppers in the woodland area. Again, these have continued to flower throughout the winter - such a good value plant and one to brighten up any area in sun or shade. Another plant which thrives in partial shade is Erithronium White Beauty, a dog's tooth violet that will spread to form quite large clump. It disappears underground in the winter and then bursts forth in all its glory in late spring.

Another few photos I couldn't resist showing you include the crab apple (Malus Red Sentinel) planted by the bottom gate. Not only does it have the pink and white scented flowers but has deep red fruit which last well into the autumn months before being devoured by the blackbirds. A shrub that grew from a seedling into a large arching specimen is Berberis Darwinii. Well, I think it is but, as I didn't plant it, that may be the wrong name – it just appeared one day and I left it to do its own thing. After all, it seems to like it there so who am I to argue! It does have to be chopped back frequently as it's next to the Magnolia Stellata and trying its best to win the growth battle.

Finally, I had to include Mahonia Aquifolium Blackfoot, growing at the end of the heather garden. Bumblebees love it and the perfume is quite heady. The downside is that it spreads and spreads and spreads – into the heathers, into the adjacent shrubs and even into the lawn!

Tips for May and June:

Keep newly planted trees and shrubs moist at the roots during dry spells by giving them a bucket of water weekly

Trim back spreading rockery plants such as aubrietia 2-3" from the base when they have finished flowering

Deadhead rhododendrons and azaleas once the flowers are over, to encourage the formation of next year's blooms

Mow lawns regularly, raising the blades slightly during hot, dry spells and don't forget to trim the edges

When the soil is moist, spread a mulch of compost, well-rotted manure or bark to repress weeds and reduce watering

Divide and replant any marginal plants around ponds that have spread beyond their allotted space

Thin overgrown clumps of water lilies and remove some of the larger leaves

Keep ponds clear of algae before large masses form

Plant half-hardy bulbs such as crinum in sheltered positions

Plant dahlia tubers in well-prepared ground that has been enriched with well-rotted manure or garden compost

Plant out half-hardy annuals when the fear of frost has passed

Protect plants from slugs especially when the weather is warm and humid. Sheep's wool pellets are good for this

Lift and divide primroses and polyanthus after flowering

Hoe frequently to remove weeds whilst they are still young

Last, but not least, sit down and enjoy your garden!

Please let us know if amendments are required to the Frampton Directory email: framptonian@aol·com

Zoe Smith

How many residents of Frampton can claim they represent their country at sport?

Well, here in our village we have Zoe Smith who currently represents England at para-surfing. Zoe, who lived until recently in Bournemouth, was active in many sports while at school, but it was not until a fateful car accident, where, as a passenger she lost her left leg from the knee down, that she took up the sport.

There are various para-surfing categories depending on the level of disability and in Zoe's category she was placed 5th in the recent World Championships held in Pismo Beach, California, see below.

Following her accident, Zoe saw film footage of parasurfing and was inspired to try out this activity. She was quickly entranced with surfing and along with plenty of determination she has seen her quickly master the sport. Zoe benefits from plenty of local beaches which offer the right level of surf. Her favourites are Bournemouth, Lyme Regis, Charmouth and Swanage. Even though Frampton is inland, she fell in love with the village and surrounding countryside and made an offer for her cottage after her first viewing.

In addition to the local beaches, and in order to experience more challenging wave conditions, Zoe trains at various Championship graded beaches overseas. Typically she will spend up to 8 weeks abroad each year and is shortly to travel to train and compete in Sri Lanka, Barbados and Hawai'i.

Whilst surfing is a relatively new Olympic sport, it is not expected to include para or adaptive surfing until the 2032 Brisbane Olympics.

In the early days, Zoe found her prosthetic leg was ill suited to surfing in that it was neither waterproof nor aerodynamic. She has personally funded a bespoke prosthetic leg which is far more suited to being immersed in water and is shaped more appropriately to cut down on drag, thereby enabling her to be more responsive on the board. Unfortunately little public funding is available to para athletes and whilst some sponsors provide kit and equipment, Zoe largely has to fund the costs of travel, insurance and accommodation herself from her property investment business.

If any readers are inspired by Zoe's surfing, she is happy that anyone contact her via Facebook.

Nature Notes

On consideration of all the flora and fauna to see in spring then yellow is surely the colour of the season. My notes this month have a strong yellow theme!

Unavoidable are the lesser celandines, which form clumps and carpets of glossy heart shaped leaves topped by a multitude of bright star shaped flowers. They are everywhere from the green to the hedgerows, the river banks to the woods, and impossible to eliminate from a garden! They are in the same family as buttercups but earlier to flower, and by summer all sign of them will disappear including their leaves. The name celandine is derived from the Greek word chelidon for swallow, as both are harbingers of spring. Wordsworth's nodding daffodils poem is famous but he wrote 3 poems in praise of celandines and he declared it his favourite flower!

More welcome in gardens are soft yellow primroses, another plant of woodlands and hedgerows, and there is a lovely display in the churchyard. Its name is derived from Latin for 'first rose' and its five-petalled flowers do resemble those of a dog rose. It is the food plant for caterpillars of the rare Duke of Burgundy butterfly, unlikely to be seen locally but in May and June they can be seen on the slopes below the Cerne Abbas giant.

The male catkins of pussy willow have a yellow stage, initially they are furry and silver grey, but then the densely packed stamens extend, dusted in yellow pollen. Against a blue sky they are stunning! There is a semi fallen tree in Harry's Wood which continues to flower spectacularly despite being prostrate, and there are trees in the hedgerows of the Southover fields. Pussy willow is either goat or grey willow (sallow) which are small trees often with multiple stems. Female catkins (on separate trees) are longer and greener.

One of the earliest butterflies in spring is the brimstone, the male appearing butter yellow as it flies, while the females are paler, almost white. Perhaps the name butterfly derives from this one?

We saw the first in our garden this year on 21 March, and we will see them regularly until autumn. The adults live for a comparatively long time as they emerge from their chrysalides in late summer and immediately feed up on nectar to hibernate through winter, then waking in early spring to mate. This butterfly always rests with its wings closed, only the underwings visible and appearing greener – it resembles a leaf despite its pretty pink antennae.

There are lots of birds to select which have a little yellow on them – yellowhammer, goldcrest, goldfinch – but the one I have chosen is the grey wagtail! I know it doesn't sound like a good choice but it is very poorly named as the male in summer plumage has a beautiful yellow breast which extends from chest to tail, with a small black throat and grey upperparts. I recently spotted one from the green, flying along the Frome. The black and white pied wagtail is more often seen in local gardens and both have the long wagging tail.

So many yellow things and no space to mention more but I've included a photo of the vanilla-scented gorse in the fields at Southover Bottom, what a view!

VILLAGE HALL SPRING SALE

It was all hands on deck on Friday 25th March for our Spring sale in an attempt to assemble everything we had in store, bring in other donated items already collected, receive new contributions and 50/50 items ready for the sale to begin at 10.30 on the Saturday morning.

As usual, we had organised our catering team and had a good supply of refreshments which proved very popular. Saturday was a beautiful sunny day and we set out tables and chairs on the patio by the river. Bacon and sausage sandwiches proved to be the order of the day!

By 10.30 there was a queue of punters stretching around into the car park, headed up by a few dealers ready to pounce on a bargain or two, having already tried to get into the sale early.

Having had a good number of prizes left over from our Christmas Craft Fair Tombola, Vic Pullman and Bryan Wilcox set up a slightly smaller version, adding other items to the shelves. They were soon counting the cash. In addition to the Tombola they were also looking after the Ukraine Bucket which raised £53 by the end of the sale and which would appear again at the Jazz Evening and at the Big Breakfast.

Trade was brisk and soon we had sold three excellent bicycles, a couple of hedge trimmers, the snooker table and accessories, and a number of the 50/50 items displayed on the stage. Unfortunately, a brand new greenhouse, still in its original packing and with instructions and invoice remained unsold and is currently in store.

Sales from the enormous rectangle of tables in the centre of the hall were good and cleared much of our glassware and pottery, and some very nice table lamps. By lunchtime 100 visitors had come to the sale but new arrivals were few and, not having set a time for closing, we decided to enjoy a sandwich and a drink before shutting up shop at around 2pm. Then it was time to clear up! A few of the remaining quality items were retained for future sales together with other things that may be useful at the time of the Fete.

I was asked by the seller to take unsold 50/50 items to Weldmar in Dorchester together with unsold clothing items, and a collection of artworks that we had had in store following their appearance at several sales. I was surprised by the surly attitude encountered from a female member of staff at Weldmar reception as everything offered was of good quality. She rejected several of the items of furniture and all the artworks. So, it was round to Dorset Reclaim who enthusiastically welcomed everything we had to offer! It goes without saying who I shall deal with in future!

Altogether, a successful sale raising over £600.00 and our thanks go to everyone who supported it in any way. Colin Pook

News

Our most recent event was on Saturday 16th April when there was 'Jazz in the Village', an event postponed from previous years due to Covid restrictions.

An audience of about 50 from around the village and beyond came along to enjoy an informal evening of Jazz by Ian Millar on saxophone and clarinet, and Dominic Spencer on piano.

The hall was set out 'Bistro Style' with varying numbers occupying tables bearing a variety of cloths. Each table was lit with lighting in wine bottles.

It was certainly something new for our village hall and, I think, enjoyed by the audience - if their applause was any indication. A well stocked bar provided sustenance together with bowls of nibbles on the tables.

Thanks go to Malcolm Potter who put things together and to Dawn, Dave Tharby, Vic Pullman and Heather who were all involved in making the evening such a success.

We also thank Frampton Garage for having tickets on sale and, of course, all those who attended the evening.

We now look forward to Saturday 7th May when we will hold our Annual Spring Big Breakfast.

This will be served from 9am until around 12 noon. All the usual ingredients will be there sourced from Little Angus at Grimstone and prepared by our own team of master caterers.

Do come along if you can, even if it is just for a cup of tea or coffee and a chat. However, don't be surprised if the smell of a 'full English', a small English or a bacon sandwich takes your fancy when you are there! We look forward to seeing you.

17th FVN QUIZ

Following many requests on the evening of our 16th Quiz at the end of 2021, it was agreed to stage another event in the Spring of 2022.

I circulated everyone who had competed in our quiz evenings over the past 5 years or so, sat back and waited.

Surprisingly only 9 team entries were received. Many would-be participants cited Covid as the reason for not entering this time as the event was close to Easter and they were expecting visits from friends and family, or were going to visit them, or going on holiday.

But all was not lost and 9 teams equated to a potential 36 participants. In fact, it was to be 34 as both the winning team and the runner up turned up with 3 members each!

Mike Elliott and Dave Bentley, our perennial question-masters, entertained in their usual way, the evening beginning with 3 rounds of 10 questions each. Then we had the 'True or False' round, the very large Easter Egg being won by a member of Carolynn Bednall's team before the mid evening break's sandwich supper was served. This had been prepared by Cynthia Whyte and her FVN colleagues as usual.

FVN Chairman, Cynthia, pulled out the raffle tickets. Gin, wines, and chocolates were to be won, all donated by contestants and members of the FVN Committee.

Next was round 4 entitled 'Round About Frampton' which I had put together and passed to our question-masters to save them having to write all 6 rounds! It is surprising what some Framptonians don't know about their environs, but I know for certain that a few more copies of the Frampton Village History were sold as a result of this round.

Throughout the evening business at the bar was excellent. At the Autumn event we had not offered Prosecco on the wine list so, as requested, we had it available this time. Available? ... yes. Enough? ...no! 8 bottles, and we only had 9 teams and still it wasn't enough. In fact, I took home only one bottle of wine, hardly any beer, and a few ciders and soft drinks. If nothing else, Framptonians do enjoy their evenings out!

With the last few rounds finished, it was time to tot up the scores. There was a wide range of results from 23, scored by "Not a Clue", to the winning score of 44 by "Fab Footlights". Only one point behind, on 43, were the "Red Roses". Next were scores of 40, 39 and 38, so it was very tight at the top.

Our grateful thanks to everyone who took part in our 17th Quiz which raised almost £300.00.

We aim to continue to promote two quizzes each year which we hope will fund the continued production of your bi-monthly FVN without too much reliance on advertisers and donations.

To those who supported our efforts in these difficult times we give very many thanks.

See you at the next one. Colin Pook
