BLUE SKIES, SOGGY BOTTOMS and WET SOCKS

Surprisingly after days of rain we had good weather but still encountered soggy valleys and 'bottoms'.

The walk near Frampton was rather easy but arriving at the start near Tibbs Hollow and the pub proved challenging.

Before we set off, reports 'flooded' in from various sources indicating that the route via Monkey jump was impassable and Martinstown was blocked in the West by floods. In the end we made it through the flood waters.

As always we had a wonderful lunch at the Saxon Arms.
